The Vicar's Letter

Dear Friends,

October is the month for harvest Festivals in schools and churches around the country. It is a time when we celebrate the rich variety of food that we have to enjoy and which, for the most part, we take for granted.

In the middle of September, the National Audit Office published a chilling statistic. In a report, they said "The number of homeless families in the UK has risen by more than 60% and is likely to have been driven by the government's welfare reforms".

The recent reforms to the Benefits system, whilst intended to simplify things and reduce so-called 'fraud', have had an impact on the disposable incomes of some families, leading not only to increased homelessness but also food poverty.

This has led to an increase in the demand on Foodbanks and the increase in their numbers. There are now over 2,000 nationally.

The Stroud Foodbank covers our area and demand for its help is on the increase. Whilst most of us manage okay, some struggle to feed their families.

This Harvest time we are trying to raise money for the Foodbank. So, at our special Harvest service this month we will be collecting money for the Foodbank. If you would like to help but can't be there that morning, please contact one of us to make a donation.

Jesus said that he came to bring life in all its fullness. Sometimes we need to reach out to others to help enable that life in all its fullness to be possible. He also said we should love our neighbour as ourselves.

Let's share this time of plenty with those who don't have quite as much.

Best wishes,

Rev Mike Smith

We thank all those who worked long and hard in preparing for and clearing up after the fete, and to the many who attended and participated so generously on the day. Together we raised £1,850 to be used to support Kingscote Church and the Gloucestershire Historic Churches Trust.

We were fortunate with the sun shining for a couple of hours and rain only stopped outdoor activity at 4.00 pm, The steel band continued to the great pleasure of all to complete their performance at 5.00 pm and we thank them for giving up their time to play for us.

We especially thank Mrs Lorna Reynolds who was such a charming and helpful host, and Jane Nichols who coordinated all of the activity so masterfully.

The Corn Harvest

Extracts from the book 'Life and Traditions on the Cotswolds' by Edith Brill which is a splendid record of past custom and practice in the countryside.

The significance of the corn harvest, once the most important festival of the agricultural year, has diminished during the last century even as the sheaves of corn as high as a man which once took pride of place in the thanksgiving offerings made to the church Harvest Festival have diminished to a few ears or are not represented at all. Nowadays the combine harvesters have done away with sheaves and stooks, and the making of decorative sheaf-knots to hold the binding of the sheaves together is a forgotten craft.

Corn continued to be cut by hand well into the middle of the nineteenth century on large arable farms, and on the smaller farms until WWI. The sickle with its serrated edge was slower in action than the scythe, but this was compensated by the fact that it did not need continual sharpening.

Reaping with the scythe was more graceful to watch and entailed curving not bending the body. Each man had his own scythe and experience taught him how to adapt it to his own weight and height.

Holidays in the village schools were arranged to coincide with harvest times. The children's work in the fields was necessary as well as cheap. Everyone helped, even the shepherd who was generally considered free of duties outside his own. The corn must be harvested before it becomes over-ripe and everyone understood the urgency. Children led the horses and those whose fingers were too small and weak to tie the sheaves laid the straw rope about them to save the time of the woman or older child following on.

The Harvest supper was the one occasion when the farmer, his family, with the vicar and any of the local gentry who cared to participate, served the workers including the blacksmith, wheelwright and as many other tradesmen or outsiders as might be said to have had a connection with harvest. The farmer and his special guests sat at the top table, his womenfolk and maids waited on the tables, and others sat in order of importance, the foreman, the head carter, the shepherd nearest the top, the lesser men in order of seniority and descending to the farm boys at the bottom. The meal was of roast beef or mutton, with great dishes of roast and boiled potatoes and greens, and to follow apple pudding or plum duff which had been boiled in the copper. And after the food, mugs freshly filled with beer or cider and pipes lit, came the songs and toasts and then the dancing.

Casual remarks have the power to shape people's lives

*Very short extracts from an article by Monsignor Roderick Strange
Professor of theology at St Mary's University, Twickenham published in The Times on Saturday 16 September.*

Relationships form us. St Paul's line 'The life and death of each of us has its influence on others,' is telling. Our way through life is never solitary. Even the committed recluse is reacting to others, by shying away from them. It can be a valuable exercise to pause occasionally and bring to mind those who have influenced us.

We may think initially of parents, siblings, spouses, grand parents and children. The circle widens. Then there are friends and colleagues, and sometimes strangers whom we have met by chance, but with whom perhaps a casual conversation made its mark, a piece of advice offered or a word of wisdom spoken. The life and death of each of us has its influence on others.

From time to time it is good to recognise those who have influenced us and be grateful. It is relationships that form us.
